

STEPHAN TUBENE, PhD

Education:

- Ph.D. in Agricultural Economics, Kansas State University, July 1997
- M.S. in Agricultural Economics, Alcorn State University, May 1993
- B.S. in Chemistry and Agricultural Industries (Ingénieur Agronome), Institut Facultaire des Sciences Agronomiques de Yangambi (IFA/Yangambi), Democratic Republic of Congo, July 1987.

Research:

Community and Economic Development

- Farmers' Knowledge and Resource Sharing Networks: Implication for Community Economic Development.
- Investigating Soybean Value Chains in Mozambique.

Climate Change

- Potential Media Influence on Farmers' Perceptions of Climate Change: Evidence from the Delmarva Peninsula.
- Extreme Weather and Climate Change: Understanding Impacts and Adaptation Strategies for Small Farmers in the Delmarva Peninsula.
- Climate Change: Impacts for Socially Disadvantaged Farmers, Landowners and Communities of Color.

Food Security

- Marketing Agricultural Products in Maryland: Lessons Learned.
- Adopting Specialty Crops: Constraints and Opportunities.
- Investigating Quinoa Value Chain in Guyana.
- Assessing the Economic Viability of a Backyard Beekeeping Practice Using Capital Budgeting.

- Building Capacity for Crop Threat Surveillance and Forecasting in the Democratic Republic of Congo and Kenya: A Transboundary Cooperation Approach.
- Building Capacity across 1890 Land-Grant Universities to Address Global Food Security and Enhance Student Learning and Community Engagement.

Resource Economics

- Land Use in Low and Middle Income Countries

Publication and Scholarly Activities:

Tubene's research has made a meaningful impact and contributed to the advancement of the Department's goals, the mission of the University, and the betterment of the mankind. As indicated in the Google Scholar link, several scientists and researchers have cited Tubene's publications to enhance their own research and/or bring solutions to the issues being analyzed.